

Jewish Woman magazine celebrates extraordinary members of our community—honoring them and the values that shape their personal and professional lives in every issue. The leading lifestyle publication for Jewish women, Jewish Woman is one of the most engaging benefits of JWI membership.

The magazine's award-winning website, www.jwmag.org, provides access to interactive features and a virtual community for Jewish Woman's 75,000 readers. Each year, 10 "Women to Watch"— exceptional women, inspired by their Jewish values toward personal and professional achievement—are profiled in the fall issue of Jewish Woman magazine and honored at a gala luncheon in Washington, DC.

JWI gives Jewish women the power of a collective voice to express their values in so many ways. While our primary goal is helping others, we also celebrate ourselves and each other—as women, as Jews, as a vibrant community, making a difference in the world. Through our magazine and programming, JWI offers members and donors an opportunity to connect with a fascinating group of Jewish women—locally, nationally and internationally.

Why join JWI's growing community?

JWI is the leading Jewish women's organization working to protect women and children from domestic abuse in the Jewish community

JWI has been healing the lives of emotionally disturbed children in Israel for more than 60 years through our cornerstone program, the Residential Treatment Center

JWI is a catalyst for building women's personal safety and economic security here at home, in Israel and around the world

JWI is a leader in mentoring, educating and promoting the success of Jewish women from all economic levels

JWI extends its work to youth through violence prevention and prejudice awareness programming for teenage boys and girls

JWI's 75,000 members, supporters and volunteers function as a community of women dedicated to service and philanthropy, with both national and community-based programming

JWI has compiled the most comprehensive list to date of domestic violence resources in the Jewish community

JWI's award-winning lifestyle magazine, Jewish Woman (www.jwmag.org), is the leading publication for and about Jewish women

Jewish Women International

*Building peace in our homes . . .
in our communities . . .
and in our world.*

Jewish Women International (JWI)

is a community of women joining hands, hearts and minds to promote peace—in families and in communities in the United States, in Israel, and around the world.

Founded in 1897 as B'nai B'rith Women, we have evolved into an organization that unites more than 75,000 women in 200-plus active volunteer networks around the Jewish concept of tikkun olam—repairing the world.

Action, advocacy and education are the tools we use to help tens of thousands of women and children worldwide. Our network of dedicated Jewish women continuously pools personal and financial resources to:

- Educate Jewish communities and leaders about prejudice and family violence, and equip them with practical tools to help victims;
- Stay abreast of public policy initiatives and give members a vehicle for adding their voices;
- Sustain programs in North America, Israel and Russia that shelter, counsel and empower victims of family violence;
- Champion self-sufficiency, economic opportunity and emotional health for women and children around the world.

A diverse roster of programs & projects, local, national and international in scope, effects substantive change in the lives of women and girls all over the world. Networks of JWI members, supporters and volunteers catalyze our portfolio of work through their generosity, creativity and hard work.

Our outreach, training and education initiatives build awareness and knowledge—so communities can better serve abuse victims, and young girls and boys can learn what a healthy relationship should be.

Economic security and literacy programs empower women to escape abusive relationships and thrive on their own.

Promoting safety in Jewish homes is the ultimate goal of all JWI programs—particularly those that protect and heal the victims of violence.
