*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: Please feel free to interact with the content and ask questions in the chat.

Donna Mathews: I've been to this website. This is a great resource. I think this is the one where they even show you the Zillow searches they did and they show how many houses there are available for certain price, and therefore wages required to rent or own.

Pamela Adams: What website was the previous slide from? And the others regarding finances?

*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: I think we will make the slides available after this Town Hall meeting

Donna Mathews: National Low Income Housing Coalition.

*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: Thank you, Donna!

Pamela Adams: Thank you

Renisha Udorji: MI Governor Whitmer also launched an initiative for Frontline workers to obtain Diplomas, Certificates, & college credits.

*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: And as we've seen the racial disparities laid bare so too is the problem of violence perpetration.

*Arlene Vassell, NRCDV (she/her/hers): Thank you Kalitha!

Gabrielle Davis: These are great policy recommendations! What must we do differently to achieve them in ways that our earlier efforts to promote these same policies have failed?

*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: I'm sure poor women had much less access to birth control.

*Rebecca Cline, ODVN, she/her/hers: You are singing my song, Kalitha! De-siloing and working collaboratively across systems!

Donna Mathews: Excellent points. Thank you so much.

Grace Huang: it's not just bringing people "into the room." also humbly going out and listening and following the lead of communities

*Casey Keene, NRCDV (she/her/hers): I'd love to hear some of participants take-aways from this session here in the chat!

Donna Mathews: I agree, this is a different time and it is so good to hear. I think the policy makers who are successful will be those who are willing to listen. People are ready to hold them accountable.

*Casey Keene, NRCDV (she/her/hers): Thanks so much for this great session!!

Sharon Daugherty: And... run for office!!

*Arlene Vassell, NRCDV (she/her/hers): Thanks Diego!
